Say Soviet Releases Rabbi Moses Schorr

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
PARIS—Prof. Moses Schorr, chief rabbi of Warsaw, Polish senator and principal leader of the Polish Jews, has been released from arrest by the Soviet authorities in Lwow, his two daughters in Paris were informed. Rabbi Schorr had refused to leave Poland with the Polish government evacuation party. According to Count August Zaleski, Polish Foreign Minister, the chief rabbi asserted: "As long as I am the head of Polish Jewry I cannot leave Polish soil, on which millions of Jews remain."

Rabbi Niemirower, B'nai B'rith Head, Succumbs Suddenly

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
BUCHAREST—Funeral services were held Monday for Senator Jakob Isaac Niemirower, chief rabbi of Bucharest and principal leader of the Rumanian Jews, who died last Friday of aneurysm (dilation of the arteries) after a strenuous day's work. He was 67 years old.

Members of the Jewish community paid their last respects to Rabbi Niemirower on Sunday as his body lay in state in the Great Temple. Rumanian Jews were deeply affected by a British Broadcasting Company eulogy of the chief rabbi in the Rumanian language.

The Jewish community was plunged into mourning over his death at a time when he was active in organizing relief for war refugees from Poland and was slated to head a new central Jewish body planned by the government as the legal representative of the Rumanian Jews.

Venerated by the Jews and respected in government circles, Rabbi Niemirower was fearless in protesting against anti-Semitic restrictions and he frequently intervened with the government against contemplated anti-Jewish measures. His position as the outstanding leader of the Rumanian Jews made him the target of a would-be assassin's bullets on Jan. 11, 1936, when a religious fanatic named Aurel Jonescu, said to have been incited by anti-Semites, fired three shots at him outside his home, wounding him slightly in the hip.

Besides serving as chief rabbi, Dr. Niemirower was for many years president of the Rumanian Zionist Federation, in which capacity he headed a delegation to Palestine in April, 1938, to seek enlarged immigration of Rumanian Jews to the Holy Land. He also was head of the Rumanian lodge of B'nai B'rith, international Jewish fraternal order with headquarters in Washington.

Born in Galicia in 1871, Dr. Niemirower was a rabbi in Jassy between 1899 and 1913, when he came to Bucharest as a rabbi of the Sephardic community. He had been chief rabbi of the Sephardic community since 1921, Rabbi Niemirower was elected to the Rumanian Senate as representative of the citizens of the Jewish confession. Last July he was elected a member of the Senate's committee on national education and religious affairs. He was the author of several books on Jewish religion.

Jewish Women Grabbed From Streets By Nazis

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
WILNO—Reliable advices reaching here from Nazi Poland said that 50,000 Warsaw Jews have been evicted from their apartments and told of unabated plundering of Jewish homes and rape of Jewish women by Nazi troops.

One of the latest developments is the disappearance of Jewish women, who are seized by German soldiers and taken to their camps for lewd purposes. The military authorities at Lodz ordered the Jewish community to supply 100 Jewish women and when the community failed to comply, 100 were seized at random in the streets.

Mrs. Martin Perley's Book To Be Published

Special
BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Contract for publication of her first American book has been signed by Mrs. Martin Perley, wife of the Hillel Foundation director here, with Dorrance & Co. The book's title will be "Without My Gloves," and is written under the pen name of Maie Clements.

The book is a satirical portrayal of American life and customs as seen through the eyes of an Englishwoman who traveled through the country and settled in a small university town. It is of particular interest to Indiana readers because a large part of the book is set in Indiana and gives a vivid picture of the amusing aspects of student and faculty life at Indiana University.

Although "Without My Gloves" is the first of Miss Clements' books to be published in America, her first novel "Not By Bread Alone" was published in London in 1937 and was a best seller in Australia. Miss Clements is English by birth but lived several years in Australia. She came to this country last year and now is settled here permanently.

TURNER'S BARBER AND BEAUTY SHOP:

Cleanliness is a byword among beauty shops these busy, modern days. There was a time, you know, when there was no such thing as sterilization of combs, brushes and scissors. What was used on you was used on the next customer after you left. Even today, although each shop is required to sterilize its utensils, you'll have to admit that some are still a little lax. At TURNER'S you are assured a clean, healthy atmosphere. Make TURNER'S your beauty headquarters. Their address is 34th and Illinois streets.

SCHRIEVER'S STUDIO:

Most of us have a tendency to do a lot of eating during the winter months. Our bodies burn up lots and lots of energy, and therefore our food intake is much greater. Many women do not realize that their increased diet means added weight. In the case where you've been skinny and run down all summer, and need added poundage, my suggestion to you is, eat as much as you can. However, if you start to feel bulges and rolls where none were before, it is high time you did something about it. To get proper results you must try SCHRIEVER'S right now. Phone HA. 1143 for an appointment today, and visit their studio, 2702 North Pennsylvania street, tomorrow.

INDIANA FUR CO.:

These exceptional values being offered now are a tribute to the confidence they enjoy today from thousands of fashion-wise value-seeking women who know that luxurious beauty, superb quality and greatest value, plus an unrivaled variety, are "buy words" at the INDIANA FUR COMPANY.

Foreign Foods If You Can't Travel, You Can Prepare Foreign Foods, Post's Menu Expert Tells Stay-At-Homes

By MILDRED GROSBERG BELLIN

MOST of us are born with a yearning to go to far-off places. We want to see strange sights, hear new songs, and taste odd foods. Some are lucky enough to travel all over the world, but the poor stay-at-homes must do the best they can with books and pictures. Foreign restaurants with lots of native atmosphere are a great help, and so are the dishes we can make at home.

Many foreign foods are not too different from those we eat every day, especially our old Jewish favorites. But many are strange to us. Here are some recipes gathered from far places and adapted to home preparation. All the ingredients are familiar and may be found at any good grocery. Try them, eat with a dash of imagination, and a pleasant arm chair voyage to you all.

Our first one comes originally from Paris. It is a much simplified version of a mousse with a tantalizing flavor, rich but not sweet.

Chocolate Mousse

1 quart heavy sour cream (the Jewish delicatessen kind)
8 teaspoons sifted confectioner's sugar
1½ cups Hershey's chocolate syrup
2 teaspoons vanilla

Combine sugar, syrup and vanilla. Mix thoroughly with cream. Freeze in tray of automatic refrigerator until firm but not hard. Stir once during freezing. Lower, or should I say raise, the temperature, and allow to remain for two or three hours for the flavor to ripen.

And now if we had a magic carpet, it would carry us off to Turkey for

Shish Kabob

2 pounds lamb
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon onion juice
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
3 larger firm tomatoes
Remove excess fat from lamb and cut into squares 1½ inches thick. Mix oil, onion juice, salt and pepper. Rub each square with the mixture and let stand in refrigerator for one hour. Cut tomatoes into squares the size of the lamb. Alternate on long skewers and broil at 350 degrees Fahrenheit about thirty minutes, until the lamb is cooked. Remove skewers and serve.

Of course, no cruise around the world would be complete without Indian Curry. There are several ways of making it. This one is very nice.

Oh, gnats, pretty Judy Garland is warbling a new ditty over the radio as I try to write this drivel. But business comes before pleasure, so brush the snow off your coats, put on the ol' house slippers, sit by the fire (or gas range if you no gottem hot flame) and, well, let's just have a friendly gab-session.

First off, we've got to give youse pipples more info about ourselves, dope that will make our enemies turn flip-flops. Contrary to the belief of mis-informed persons, there is no Jewish control in the management or ownership of either transport or manufacture in the aviation industry. Jews have rarely entered the light and power, telephone and telegraph, engineering industries in general, as is true of heavy machinery, lumber and dairy products.

Tuesday afternoon, while cruising down Meridian street in my limousine (tin lizzy to youse), I spied Jack Maurer and his Bantam car. Well, he and the pint-sized gasoline buggy were stuck in the middle of the street and did you or you think he tried to get anyone to give him a push? Heck no! He put one hand on the steering wheel, one foot on the running board, the other on the pavement and as you or I would drive a scooter, he pedaled along at a merry clip and then jumped in. The motor started and away he went. Some stuff, eh Lem?

Annette Herman, she of the talented voice and the ready laugh, is now teaching ballet dancing. Now that you know it, I'll bet a whole slew of you local Lothario's and Cleopatra's sign up for the course. Poihaps mebbe there's a Nijinsky or a Pavlowa in de mob.

The Post went through quite a lot of trouble to establish a travel bureau for coming winter sojourns to the South. So, when you get ready to say Aloha to Nap town and Helloa to Miami, we'll give you all the dope on hotels, transportation, etc. Just give us a buzz or drop us a card. Ain't we nice?

Junior Hadassah's membership dance at the Marott Saturday night was ona greata beega success. Just when Rabbi Charry and his wife were getting all unlimbered and started to swing and sway, she had to leave for home to feed the baby. Such is life when you're raisin' young'uns. We saw Adele Levy and Harold Stolkin, Maxine Levy and Harold Zuckerman, Bess Draizer and Abe Stein, Lillian Eshowsky and Phil Hyman, Ida Logan and Mark Klain, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stein, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schwartz, Margaret Davis and her fiancé, Paul Zimmerman, Ruth Smulyan and her fiancé, Isadore Goldfarb, Caroline Patnick and Morris Schwartz, Hanna Leah Miller and Lou Logan, and by the way, Hanna Leah sported de-lovely orchids. Sam Goldman and Clara Litvak were there, too, as were Frieda Cohen and Benny Nahmias, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Silberman, and many more.

Iva Belle Schildmier left for good ol' Chicago supposedly to visit friends this week-end, but we know dee-fee-rently. She's been suffering the pangs of loneliness and hied up to see her fiancé. Sorry, don't know his name.

Congrats to Bob Schwab on his birthday. He celebrated by taking Annette Simon to English's Saturday night to see "White Steed" and then they meandered over to the Columbia Club to join a whole slew of the gang who were attending a dinner-dance there.

No kidding, folks, this intra-mural league is going to be a honey this year and we want all of you to show up at two bells Sunday for the opening game. There's no charge, so what have you got to lose?

Well, I hope you haven't eaten too much turkey by now, or are you one of those anti-New Dealers who will do their gobbler gobbling next week? At any rate, make it one or the other, don't celebrate both and eat yourselves out of house and home!

Have a nice weekend, kiddies, and we'll see you Sunday at Kirshbaum Center.

1,500,000 Polish Jews Are In Need of Food

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

PARIS—Bread and warm clothing for nearly 1,500,000 hungry Jews in Nazi Poland and winter clothing for 500,000 homeless Jewish refugees under the Soviet occupation is the need of the hour, according to a "reasonably complete and accurate summary" of the situation of the Polish Jews received here. The summary revealed:

A million and a half Jews in Poland came under the Nazi occupation and 2,000,000 under the Soviet, the latter including 500,000 homeless refugees from German-occupied western Poland. Nearly 50 per cent of all Jewish-populated townships in Nazi Poland have been demolished by bombing.

Jewish Hate Fomenting Catholic Hate, Is Belief

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—An article describing the growth of anti-Catholic propaganda as part of the anti-Semitic drive in the United States is featured in the November issue of The Voice, organ of the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights. The 16-page tabloid also contains articles entitled "Catholics Defend Bill of Rights" and "Labor Fights Anti-Semitism."

The Christian Front was denounced for its "destructive influences" in spreading "racial and religious hatreds" in a statement issued by the Brooklyn Church and Mission Federation, representing most Protestant congregations in Brooklyn. The Greater New York Federation of Churches is understood to be considering taking a similar stand.

Dr. Sidney A. Kauffman Opens Downtown Office

Opening of offices at 640 Bankers Trust Bldg., has been announced by Dr. Sidney A. Kauffman.

A graduate of Indiana University School of Medicine, Dr. Kauffman, spent one year at the Indianapolis City Hospital, and subsequently specialized in children's diseases at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. In 1938-39, Dr. Kauffman served as resident pediatrician at the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. Dr. Kauffman will specialize in the practice of diseases of infants and children, he said.

Our Film Folk of HOLLYWOOD

By HELEN ZIGMOND

HOLLYWOOD.—What is a war propaganda film? A new local group called Associated Film Audiences, whose stated purpose is films for peace and for the preservation of our democracy, seems a bit muddled as to what is a peace-making film. "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" they hail as strengthening the fight for democracy. . . . whereas, "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" they branded as hate-fomenting, war-inciting. Even the Hays office withheld the purity seal from the latter because of the title alone. Apparently Neutrality and Peace are themselves controversial terms. As one speaker said, "I'm neutral. I don't care who kills Hitler!"

Paul Muni is still tops among screen actors—with or without a chin fringe. Only a moustache hides his identity in "We Are Not Alone" . . . yet so completely is his personality merged with that of Dr. Newcome, the small town English doctor, that he is unrecognizable. The time is 1914, outbreak of World War I. He is a self-effacing, preoccupied fellow, unconscious of the gathering clouds. When they burst thunderously about him, his personal suffering is forgotten in his castigation of war-mongers. "You who are in authority . . . who are responsible for all this killing . . . have learned nothing in 2,000 years?"

Which brings to mind the line from the "Roaring Twenties": "A patriot is a guy who is always willing to lay down your life for his country."

Speaking of war . . . the Battle of Whiskers raged in Hollywood this week. Wires burned . . . expletives bounced . . . all because Goldwyn loaned Actor Brennan (with whiskers) to Edgar Selwyn. Selwyn wanted the actor shaved. . . . Goldwyn wouldn't destroy the foliage. Blared Selwyn, "You give me Brennan without whiskers, or give me back the last half of my name you took 25 years ago!" "Indian giver!" blazed Gold—

Those double-edged axes: Russia's handshake with Germany and velvet glove for Japan have boomeranged on her film industry. Forbidden to "go to town" on their pet hates, producers face an acute story shortage. They will have to turn to biographies for material.

'Pon my silk hat! Rosey Rosendbloom attended the opera this week. His excuse was, "I'm a culture for culture!" On being introduced to a debu-tanta, who exclaimed she was pleased to meet him, Maxie erred, "The feeling is neutral, I'm sure."

In his portrayal of Dr. Ehrlich, Edward Robinson must smoke cigars incessantly. But cigars have a way of dwindling. Hence, to avoid photographing one "take" with a long cigar and the next with a stub, a gadget was invented to measure the partially smoked stogies. Five hundred new el ropos will be chopped to different lengths. Now each time the camera focuses, Robinson can pick one to the last measure and literally take up where he left off.

Speaking of gadgets . . . Joe Penner installed a recording machine next to his bed so he won't (Continued on page 7)

Between You and Me—

by PAUL A. PETERS

ASTRONOMICAL NOTE

The stars did their blinkiest best at the U. P. A.'s annual Night of Stars. . . . One of the most moving moments in an evening crammed with emotion was the brief appearance of Lou Gehrig, the noted ball star who was incapacitated by illness. . . . There were many moist eyes in the crowd when he murmured into the mike "I'm glad to be here where no bombs are falling." . . . And Luise Rainer, radiant cinemalite, drew a big laugh when she characterized Germany as a "refugee from civilization." . . . Dick Powell singing a song in Yiddish. . . . Jascha Heifetz playing first a Hebrew melody and then a Polonaise. . . . Jimmy Walker recalling the "good old days when all the Murphys cast their votes for a Goldvogel." . . . And Little Flower LaGuardia giving a lively imitation of a Master of Ceremonies caressing the mike. . . . All contributed to one of the starriest performances in the series of U. P. A. benefit dazblers. . . .

CRIMINOLOGY NOTE

The Nation publishes the following from a prospectus issued by the Trowbridge farm, a New York resort: "The Civil Rights law does not allow us to refuse accommodations to anyone on account of religious belief, but we have a regular patronage who reserve the same rooms from year to year and they constitute the society of the place. For reasons we cannot understand and find impossible to explain, they are averse to association with Hebrews. Under the circumstances we feel it our duty to advise those of that faith that it would be unpleasant for them to spend their vacation at the Trowbridge Farm." . . .

AVIATION NOTE

The two G-men of the Zionist movement—Goldman and Goldstein—are hanging up flying records for their successors to shoot at. . . . Both have covered more mileage by air than any half dozen of their predecessors put together. . . . Incidentally, when Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Jewish Agency president, makes that December trip to the United States, there are good grounds for the belief that it won't be via the steamer route. . . . The Zionist leader's two sons are seeing service with the British army. . . . One of them in the air corps. . . .

DIPLOMATIC NOTE

The word is out that Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky is still very red-faced over an unguarded reply he made to London newsmen who called for his reaction the night the news was flashed that the German-Russian agreement had been signed. . . . "Don't believe it," he snapped over the phone, "it's just Nazi propaganda." . . .

Dr. Joseph Rosen, Agro-Joint president, is back from a two-month colonization survey "south of the border—down Mexico way." . . . Samuel Goldsmith of Chicago has been named secretary of the U. J. Paul van Zeeland, ex-premier of Belgium and president of the Co-ordinating Foundation, has opened an office in the Rockefeller Center. . . . He speaks a meticulous English with the most charming of French accents. . . . There's a frantic hunt for Jewish ancestors on the part of Yugoslav Germans. . . . They came by it because they fell into the practice of avoiding blackout difficulties by meeting only on moonlit nights. . . . Speaking of B'nai B'rith, research being conducted in connection with the organization's 100th anniversary in 1943 has brought to light a number of interesting facts. . . . One of which is that Temple Emanu-El of New York City borrowed $2,000 back in 1844 from the Zion Lodge (defunct), the second in the city at the time. . . . It was Maurice Jacobs, genial secretary of the Jewish Publication Society, who schadchaned the recent merger of the Jewish Chatauqua Society and the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods. . . . Victor Chenkin, the singing actor, is very ill. . . . The staff of the Jewish Welfare Board surprise-partied their new exec. direc., Dr. Louis Kraft. . . . Serve with separate bowls of rice, grated cocoanut and Chutney.

Leftover meats may be made into a curry in the following way: Chop one small apple and two table-spoons of onion. Cook in two table-spoons fat until brown. Mash to a paste, add two teaspoons curry powder, one-sixteenth teaspoon ground cloves and one teaspoon lemon juice. Simmer ten minutes. Add this mixture to gravy and mix well. Add cut-up meat and heat thoroughly.

One of the dishes we'd walk a mile or take an ocean voyage for is Italian Chicken Cacciatori

First, cut up two tender two-pound frying chickens and fry them until a beautiful brown in one-fourth cup of olive oil. Now add two medium onions, three seeded green peppers and one red pepper (sweet) and one clove of garlic, all minced. Stir in one-fourth pound of sliced mushrooms for extra goodness. Let them all brown lightly while you mix together one small can of Italian tomato paste and 2½ cups Italian tomatoes. Add this to the first mixture with salt and pepper to taste, cover, and let it simmer gently until the chicken is very tender. Put long strands of cooked spaghetti on a platter, cover with chicken and sauce, and eat. This amount is supposed to serve six. In our family it's three, and we live in memory for days.

The Editor's Chair:

In the past few years not a few people have stopped me here and there and asked me what I thought about this or what I thought about that. If the question were on a subject about which I had already formed an opinion, I answered right there, but if the question happened to pertain to something I had not previously found it necessary to think through, then I was forced to stop and hem and haw or either answer the first thing that came into my mind.

I am not bragging (again), but I am trying to get across a point. Until people began to ask for my opinion, I hadn't gone to the trouble of thinking about problems other than those which directly affected me or my work.

And so it is (I'm off) with our community. As long as a member of Hadassah or B'nai B'rith or the Council of Jewish Women has some vague idea that a group like The Jewish Welfare Federation (I erred last week when I wrote "Fund" in this chair) is handling the problems that beset the Jewish community, they are content not to bestir themselves. But once let the Hadassah or the B'nai B'rith or the Council have a voice in choosing the people who make the decisions, and everybody will begin to think these things through for themselves.

And that dear readers is democracy. Pardon me if I use the word too often, but it's the only safe shield I have. They can attack me, they can attack my paper, but they're dead goslings when they begin to argue against democracy.

If Mrs. Shabbosdeckel thought that she was going to be asked what her opinion was about publicity in the daily papers (just to mention one minor problem) in connection with the annual Jewish Welfare Fund drive, she would try to reason the thing out. She might call on her next door neighbor after supper, and the family circle would argue the pros and cons of the question.

So you see what you approach. You raise the cultured level of everybody. The name? Sure. Democracy.

I just can't contain myself any longer. Every week when I've sat down to this chair I've wanted to tell about the thing which is uppermost in my mind. But with superhuman restraint, I've gone off to some other minor problem like democracy, or a free press or such.

But just recently the little shaver started kicking and splashing in his bath. Heretofore he's just sat there quietly, without moving a muscle, although not crying either, but now he just laughs and laughs and his eyes shine and he splashes the water over his mother and everything else within a radius of ten feet. And he can almost sit up too. His little head bobs around

Other Cities Might Take Note

THERE ARE many morals in two recent incidents in the City of Chelsea, Mass. The first incident has to do with a speech on Chelsea's anniversary by Governor Saltonstall several weeks ago in which he lauded the community for the splendid way in which its various racial groups were able to co-operate with one another, and singled it out as an example of one city in which racial animosity could gain no foothold.

The second incident has to do with the election of aldermen in Chelsea last week. One of the eight men seeking four vacant places was Wilfred H. Williams, who ran on a strictly anti-Semitic platform, and who, despite the public denunciations of civic leaders of all classes, polled not two hundred, not five hundred, but more than 5,000 votes in a community of 43,000. Of the 43,000 inhabitants of Chelsea, 18,000 are Jewish, so that Williams' 5,000 votes came from 25,000 people.

Williams' campaign was highlighted by publication of scurrilous handbills and circulars attacking the Jews. The margin by which he was defeated was closer than the point after touch down.

In making his speech, Governor Saltonstall was probably as well informed as the Jewish leaders of Chelsea. Yet he so under-estimated the under current of ill-feeling. Probably, today, and for the past few weeks the Jewish leaders of Chelsea have been running from the A. D. L. to the American-Jewish committee and maybe even to the American-Jewish Congress for advice, aid and comfort; that is, after the horse has been stolen.

A wise procedure for Chelsea, and for Indianapolis for that matter, is to educate the public to the true position of the Jew so that when the Pellys and the Williams come along, they will not so easily be able to foment hatred and bias.

If Education Were Held In High Repute

IN SPENDING that $1,000,000 to solve the problem of Jewish education in the United States, it should never be forgotten that the achievement of one sole objective, will with one stroke, provide the answer to every other problem in connection with the illiteracy of Jewish youth about Judaism and Jewish history.

Make attendance at Hebrew Schools desirable. Make attendance so attractive to the youngsters, that even the indifference of the elders will be unable to deprive Jewish youth of this element so necessary for a wholesome life in the environment in which he is going to live.

Every other problem from finances to proper instructors will solve itself in the solution of this one difficulty. It is not ordained that attendance at daily Hebrew schools need to be so much the burden and so much the distasteful task it is today.

If like the wearing of the newest fall outfit, education along Jewish lines could be made a mark of public envy, and if like the wearing of rags, ignorance could be made a mark of aversion, then all the problems vexing Jewish educators would automatically be ended.

Current Comment

Why Powerful Jews Make Poor Jewish Leaders, Told By Ben Mordecai in The Jewish Advocate.—Lord Rothschild, only a few months ago, gave expression to a statement which I have not seen quoted anywhere except in the columns of the London Jewish Chronicle. Yet, the thought contained in his statement is one which should be brought home to every thinking American Jew, and particularly to those to whom it applies.

Himself one of the leading "wealthy Jews," Rothschild drew attention to the common belief that the small group of wealthy Jews who had lived in a country for many years represented the opinion of the majority of the Jews. These so-called leaders were, in his opinion, probably the least qualified people to represent Jewish opinion.

If I had taken the responsibility, first hand, for this utterance, I would be treading on dangerous ground, for I would draw down upon me the wrath of the American Jewish Committee, of Strass and Stroock, Proskauer and Rosenwald, Adler and Austrian, Butzel and Wineman, Backer and Elkus and Ittleson, Leidesdorf, Bamberger and Rosenberg—the group who constitute self-appointed leadership of American Jewry because they are the social elite and the wealthy Jews of America. But I did not say it; it comes from Lord Rothschild, one whom they recognize as their very own.

It so happens that Rothschild is correct, for possession of wealth, while it may indicate business sagacity, investment luck, or wise choice of parents, does not in itself indicate an understanding of Jewish problems nor does it confer any special ability to meet and solve these problems. The contrary is true. Because of their wealth these people are removed from the Jewish masses, and cannot understand their mental processes, their daily lives, their likes and dislikes. Can Proskauer of New York, for example, understand the feelings of the hundreds of thousands of "Yiddisher" Jews in New York? Can Roger Strass ever sense the experiences of hundreds of thousands of Jews who work in factories and shops, who rub elbows with the millions in the subways, on the streets and in the theaters? After all, these are the common people; the problem is theirs, and it is only a person who knows them, their ways, their thoughts, their experiences and concepts, who can ever venture to be a leader of American Jewry and speak for that Jewry.

It is likewise true that just as these wealthy leaders are removed from the masses by their wealth, so are they removed from Jewish culture and spirit, and understanding—what we sum up with the word, "Yiddishkeit"—by their many years of imitative assimilation. There are fundamental elements in Jewish life which while kaleidoscopic in nature are inevitably part of that life, and enter in the colorful, multi-faceted Jewishness of our people. A confused series of words and phrases like Mendeley Mocher Seforum, Chanukah gelt, latkes, Rozhinkes mit mandlen, Friday night candles, landsmanschaften, Zionism, skimping to send Joey to college, Hebrew language, Yossele Rosenblatt's phonograph records—all these and many more are foreign to the understanding of our so-called Jewish leaders because they are removed from the sources of Jewish life—the masses. Their only contacts are with others of their kind or with non-Jews, and from none of these is there inspiration for comprehension of the basic Jewish spirit and culture.

Lord Rothschild knows all this, because he is one of that group, and that is why he says that these Jews are the least qualified people to represent opinion. Unfortunately the non-Jewish world pays heed to their wealth and influence and thus confers upon them the mantle of leadership.

The only true leadership can come from the masses of Jewry. Only one who has lived through poverty, who has been in constant contact with fellow Jews, who has been turned down in application for a job or entrance to college because of his Jewishness, who has sung Yiddish and Hebrew songs, who is acquainted with Jewish history and modern Hebrew culture, who, in short, has drawn from the sources of Jewish life, can adequately understand the Jewish people, their tragedies, their problems and their needs. Only such can truly be leaders of our people.

The American Jewish Congress Says Everybody Knows that Spirit of Competition Prevails Among Constituents of Big Four.—Until the General Jewish Council decides to begin living a full life, the American Jewish Congress—in line with the four other national agencies—will have to continue to speak of its own achievements. The spirit of competition prevails, as everybody knows, and the exercise of self-abnegation, in the face of such competition, would be a wrong to the tens of thousands who believe in, and support the American Jewish Congress.

The next time I mention B'nai B'rith in an editorial, I'm going to get eighteen encyclopedias, use three libraries of reference books, and then throw the editor in the waste basket. Remember the point I brought up about the picture of Mrs. Roosevelt at Henry Monsky. Bernard Postal, alert publicity director of the lodge, wrote me that although the photographer could have done a more accurate job, the picture actually was Mrs. Roosevelt and the lodge president.

Then several weeks ago in the chair, I told about the situation in Dalton, Ga. Writes Bernard (bloodhound) Postal again:

In the November 10th issue of The Jewish Post, you devoted your whole column to a discussion about the refusal of Dalton, Georgia community to permit the organization of a B'nai B'rith lodge there.

I don't know where you got your information, but it so happens that we have had a B'nai B'rith lodge in Dalton since July 1939.

The Lodge is in good standing and as active as a small town Lodge can be.

BERNARD POSTAL.

Despite the fact that I'm proven wrong, I'm glad to see that Dalton was honest enough to form a B'nai B'rith Lodge. But as to my informant (the blank hasn't arrived yet) I'll tell him this. If he intends to come to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby for the fourth straight year as my guest, then he'd better bring a membership card with him, or else he'll be as popular as the horse that finishes last.

The plight of Polish Jewry has been brought home to this office rather forcefully during the past few weeks. Remember the short notice we printed about the availability of a list of Polish Jews who had arrived in lands bordering what used to be Poland. Well, that short notice has brought more telephone calls, personal visits to the office and letters from out-of-town than any one other item we've printed in a long while.

Many Indianapolis and Indiana Jews, I have learned, have mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers whom they haven't heard of since the first days of the German invasion. Are they dead? Are they in German Poland or Russian Poland? Will money sent to them be delivered?

This paper wishes that it could be of more assistance than it has been. The lists in this office total something over 1,000 names out of a total of 3,500,000 Jews, so it is readily evident what little we can do. As soon as new lists arrive we check them with the names we've phoned or mailed to us, but we can hold out little hope of really helping much.
